It was a gentle climb through the sub-Alpine forest on to the melting snowline. We stopped on the ridge by a battered and solitary old foxtail pine. To the east lay Mount Shasta; to the west lay Big Foot country (the Russian Wilderness and the Marble Mountains). To the south sat the snowy summit of Mount Eddy. And to the north - stood Harry. He had big nose in my face and was blowing impatiently. That is the trouble with llamas. You can take them up a mountain, but you can never make them enjoy the view. He was doing semaphore again. One ear was pointing to the mountains; the other suggested it was time for lunch. TRAVEL NOTES ANOTHER AMERICA While most British visitors beat a well-worn path to the familiar tourist areas of the United States, Off The Beaten Track offer something different. They lead a Southwest Indian cultural and archaeological tour exploring New Mexico, Colorado and Arizona. Highlights include the Puye Cliff Indian ruins, Monument Valley and a tour of Canyon de Chelly - which some people consider more beautiful than the Grand Canyon - led by Navajo tribe members. It costs £2,330. Details from (). STOP FUMING City cyclists more used to traffic fumes will breathe deeply in the clean air around Lake Bolsen in Italy. Fresco Cycling Holidays () sell go-as-you-please cycling tours as well as one-centre holidays in the Monte Rufeno naturepark, which is closed to motor traffic. From £329, and you can take your own bike. A CASE OF THE BITER BIT? Piranha fishing is one of the attractions of the Clipper Line's cruise along the jungle rivers of South America. It departs on October 13, with another trip exploring the Amazon leaving on November 12. The cruises last from fourteen to nineteen days and prices start at £2,617. Details on.
